

David Gibson (79-84)

Died October 2003.

My brother David Gibson was one of those annoying people who was a year ahead of himself at school and still even in 1980s managed to get 5As at A Level. His disturbing expertise was in theoretical Maths and Physics and he went on to study Physics at University in Liverpool. Whilst in his 2nd Year he met his future wife Jo and went on to have 2 children. David's career was mainly with ICI where he moved from research physics into marketing and then General Business Management. This took him all over the world.

David always had a strong love of the outdoors and was a keen Mountain walker back to school days, in later life he became more interested in running and competed in several Marathons and half Marathons, finishing just behind the elite Athletes.

Sadly he was diagnosed with a tumour in his heart in 2000 soon after returning to his beloved Liverpool and despite fighting all the way; succumbed to it in 2003. He is a much missed Husband, Father, Brother and Friend. The attached picture is from happier times when he graduated in 1987 and I am sure he will be fondly remembered by many of his class mates.
